The choice is up to you... Stay in a beautiful spot, but choose either our comfortable hostel or our beautiful self-catering cottage. The hostel is perfect for individuals, families and small groups, and the self-contained cottage is great for couples or families and is well appointed with a new modern kitchen and bathroom and a double and a triple bunk bed family room (sleeps five).

Both are situated in a superb countryside location, with many walks and cycle rides within immediate reach, including The Pennine Way, The Pendle Way, The West Craven Way, Lancashire Cycle Way, and The Tour of Britain cycling route. You are also within reach of many attractions, including Thornton Hall Country Park, Boundary Mill and Skipton Castle. There are great village pubs you can walk to including the historic Red Lion.

You can easily walk and cycle on the nearby Leeds & Liverpool Canal towpath leading to other lovely countryside villages and their pubs, including East Marton, and explore Pendle Hill area and Skipton and the Yorkshire Dales, which is a short distance away. The hostel is the former home of Katharine Bruce Glasier, the grandmother of the Labour party and one of the Pendle Radicals. Behind the youth hostel and cottage is a superb large garden with its own waterfall! Both properties are peaceful retreats, on the edge of Earby village, with easy access to beautiful countryside. So come and throw off your worries and join us!

Wheels around Pendle

Pendle is a wheelie great place if you enjoy cycling! Whether you’re up for a King of the Mountain climb, want to try BMX or simply fancy a leisurely cycle ride alongside the Leeds and Liverpool Canal, there are many directions to choose from.

Manny Bashah and Andy McGhie have a passion for cycling running through their veins. And through Cycle Sport Pendle they are coaching a new generation of BMXers at our new pump track which opened last summer.

Manny says: “A pump track appeals to young people because it’s fun and exhilarating to ride!” “Ours is a very unique pump track which uses the natural environment as a feature and there’s an inner track for beginners,” he adds.

“Plus there’s a trials bike area with obstacles where more experienced cyclists can practice their BMX bike tricks,” explains Andy.

Budding BMXers can join Manny and Andy on Saturday mornings at the pump track where they lead Pendle Panthers and details are on www.pendle.gov.uk/bmx.

At other times people of all ages from six or seven and up are welcome to try out the new 400 metre BMX track and the cycle circuit next door for free.

Manny adds: “The beauty of it is that both circuits are open to the public and people are on them every day!” “Other closed circuits are locked, but you are always welcome to use one of the best cycling facilities in the country!” Check availability of the track at www.cdpp.org.uk

Both tracks are at the Steven Burke Hub named after Pendle’s double Olympic gold medallist and can be found via Wilton Street, Barrowford BB9 8PU.

“The traffic free circuit is also a great place to gain confidence on a bike and then venture out onto the canal towpath and numerous beautiful traffic free routes around Pendle,” says Andy.

Visit www.visitpendle.com for a range of favourite rides from Pendle cyclists, including Manny’s 30 mile ride around Pendle’s Three Peaks and Andy’s 21 mile route from Wycoller Country Park with its historic ruined hall which follows part of the Pennine Bridleway.

Cycle training is available for children and adults with Pendle’s own cycling trainers Go Velo who can do mixed family sessions and tailor made guided rides for families during the summer holidays to show people the local area www.govelo.co.uk.

And there are guided rides, track sessions and women only Breeze Bike rides in Pendle run by British Cycling with information on www.letsride.co.uk.

To complement the wide range of vehicles on show, the group choose a theme each year and have covered The Italian Job with its minis and special bus, the VW Beetle for Herbie’s 50th birthday plus millions of pounds worth of racing cars.

The theme for the 2019 event on 26th May is World Tour and will feature cars from around the world, a live arena and food to match. “It’s not just for petrolheads,” says Chris. “A lot of the team are parents, which has really helped us make sure Pendle Powerfest is a real family event.”

We’ve introduced race simulators, live music, bouncy castles, children’s entertainment and competitions “There’s nothing like it locally,” says Chris. “It’s a truly unique, family-friendly festival which raises money for a small local and a larger charity every year.”
H e’s spent so many years focused on Pendle Hill he really wanted a home for his growing family with a view of our iconic landmark.

He soon realised that such places were north facing and exposed to the prevailing westerly winds which sweep down the valley off the Irish Sea and the West Pennine Moors. He says: “We found a great place on the lee side of a hill in a small south facing valley. We call it Costa del Salford!”

Alastair makes rock climbing and adventure films, travelling to the world’s extreme places to capture exhilarating and nail-biting footage and photos. “When I came home after living outdoors in Australia and New Zealand I was more in tune with light and weather conditions and started to look for those elements in Pendle’s landscape,” he states.

“My take on Pendle became epic, including capturing the hill looking like Uluru, Ayer’s Rock.”

Thanks to this new approach, Alastair’s first photographic book on his beloved hill – Pendle, was groundbreaking. “People said they’d never seen Pendle Hill like this!”

The secret to capturing these unique pictures is about the light and conditions and Alastair gets up early, stays out late and watches the weather. Living in the area and with years of experience of climbing the hill and walking the foothills under Pendle has given him that intimate knowledge of the best views. And he studies maps to find new vantage points. Sharing his tips, Alastair says: “Mountain Top Farm above Upper Black Moss Reservoir near The Pendle Sculpture Trail and the village of Barley is one of my favourite places for photographing.

“There are many public footpaths and the land drops away to the north and west,”

Another is the top of Weets near Barnoldswick, one of Pendle’s three peaks. “From Weets, Pendle Hill looks more symmetrical. It’s not a typical view point,” he explains.

This and many other striking angles of Pendle Hill are featured in the book he has just launched, Pendle Witch Country.

He made the most of the diverse weather in 2018 for his new book. “We had an incredibly cold, snowy winter, a spectacular spring and a hot summer – proper seasons! It was a gift to a photographer.

“To capture the spooky atmosphere I took more pictures around Newchurch and Roughlee, villages that have powerful associations with the Pendle Witches of 1612.”

And this untamed landscape has been the backdrop for generations of radical thinkers.

Thanks to £1.8 million from the Heritage Lottery Fund, the Pendle Hill Landscape Partnership has started an exciting four year programme of heritage and countryside activities based on and around our iconic hill.

As part of this partnership, Mid Pennine Arts will be identifying the sites and telling the stories of notable radicals and activists from the area’s past as part of a Pendle Radicals project.

Photographer and film maker Alastair Lee has lived here all his life and he’s still finding dramatic new angles on Pendle Hill and its wild landscape.

F rom Bronze Age and Roman settlers to the Pendle Witches of 1612 and from George Fox’s visionary climb in 1652 which led to the Quaker movement, our dominating hill has been an inspiration.

And this untamed landscape has been the backdrop for generations of radical thinkers.

They include 17th century mathematician Sir Jonas Moore, known as ‘the father of time’ who played a pivotal role in establishing the Greenwich Observatory and Greenwich Mean Time.

A new Jonas Moore Trail in the foothills of Pendle Hill is just four and a half miles long but covers over 400 years of history in a little-known part of the Forest of Bowland.

It explores a hidden valley where there are manor houses dating back to the time of Henry VIII and Elizabeth I and evidence of the past going back to medieval times.

And now visitors and local people can experience and discover even more about this Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty and its fascinating history.

Come and find out more with our friendly and knowledgable walk leaders.

Guided walks on Quaker and Jonas Moore and other Pendle Radicals themes will be included in our week long Pendle Walking Festival programme from Saturday 10 – Sunday 18 August 2019.

And there are opportunities to get involved throughout the year; whether you’re here for a short break or are lucky enough to live in the area.

Cathy Hopey, the Pendle Hill Partnership Programme Manager explained: “We’ve a wide range of exciting projects and events to reconnect us with the heritage and landscape of this special place.”

“People will be able to try their hand at the old countryside skills of drystone walling and hedge laying.

“And there are opportunities to find out more about the Pendle Witches through an archaeological project.

“We’ve been digging into the past at the site of what may have been Malkin Tower, home of the Devices, one of the families condemned as witches over 400 years ago,” explained Cathy.

“Over the next three years we will also be improving footpaths, managing wildlife sites, and providing better information for visitors on where to go, what to see and how to join in and learn more about our wonderful heritage.”

Family friendly village treasure trails, foraging events and wildlife walks are being planned too and visitors will get the benefit of improved paths up Pendle and a new shelter from the wind.

A Labour of Love

What makes Whitelea holiday cottage in the village of Trawden so special? Is it because it was built with love, stone by stone and beam by beam by the owners’ parents, Ron and Marjorie Gray, who bought the cowshed and barn in 1977 to renovate as their home?

After daughters Ruth and Jane went off to start their own families, Ron and Marjorie needed a project to get their teeth into. And it was quite some project!

Ruth points out: “It was a complete wreck when they bought it and built it up practically from scratch. It was a real labour of love.”

Jane adds: “They did almost everything themselves, with hard graft. Dad was an engineering draughtsman in the 1960s and later worked as a metalwork teacher in Burnley and mum worked as a Comptometer Operator – an early calculator. They had no building experience between them!”

Sometimes the whole family came to help, including the grandchildren! And it’s this family loyalty and love which has helped to create such a beautiful, unique home.

That skill and love can be seen in some of the features, including the stained-glass window that sends beams of coloured light into the cozy but modern living area. As Jane says, “Visitors have said they feel they’re coming home after a day of sightseeing and walking. How could we bear to part with this fantastic place? We decided to keep it in our family and share it with others.

A holiday cottage seemed the ideal solution.”

Ruth says “The nicest cottages to me are those that look like the owners have just gone out. To this end I have created many unique textile and artworks, as a home would have, which I hope will provide interest to our visitors.”

“We have updated the interiors bringing in furnishings that we feel keep the cozy, homely feel and enhance this unique property. We asked ourselves what we looked for in a holiday cottage and tried to provide more than just the essentials. One example of our own touches is a cascade of lamps in the stone fireplace.”

Walk out into the beautiful garden for an alfresco meal and a glass of wine and enjoy the peaceful view, and the grandchildren! And it’s this family loyalty and love which has helped to create such a beautiful, unique home.

And with Bands on the Square in May, thousands of visitors come to enjoy this buzzing little town surrounded by rolling Pennine hills.

November’s Switch On Saturday before Christmas includes a spectacular lantern parade around the town.

Its local volunteers known as the bloomers tend the town’s glorious floral features and have won many awards from North West Britain in Bloom. From spring through to autumn, the town is ablaze with colour including a bloom bedecked ‘buzz’ stop filled with bee friendly flowers and a vertical garden covering the side of a building. “The newly laid out sensory garden is well worth a visit,” says David Whipp. “It has several intriguing features reflecting Barnoldswick’s history and geography, with the planting designed to highlight senses such as touch, taste, hearing and smell.”

Beyond the town centre, Barnoldswick has a rich heritage to be explored.

Take a step back in time when you come to Barnoldswick. The town centre, with its attractive stone flagged square and surrounded by Victorian buildings, is one of the best places in the UK for independent shops.

“It’s a friendly place full of family run businesses, including traditional butchers and bakers and there’s a great community spirit” says local champion David Whipp.

It’s this and the town’s busy events calendar which led to Barlick, as it’s known, winning a top place in the national Great British High Street awards.

The judges were bowled over by the family-friendly events the town runs throughout the year, which makes the most of the town square.

Also winner of a Britain’s Best Inland Beach award, the town becomes Barlick on Sea in August.

Buzzing Barnoldswick!

A Steam and Steam Trail takes you not only through the town but through time. It leads you past handloom weavers’ cottages and a working steam engine museum at Bancroft Mill.

The Trail includes the famous summit stretch of the 200 year old Leeds and Liverpool Canal at Greenberfield Locks with its summer time café. And along the canal you’ll find Ouzledale Foundry where they’ve been engineering cast iron stoves for over 160 years. Have a look at the exhibition and there’s a café.

Walks on the towpath lead to a wonderful network of footpaths across surrounding countryside, ranging from heather clad hillsides to pastoreal valley walks and egg shaped drumlin hills, remnants of the last ice age.

“After a walk, you’ll be ready to sample our varied restaurants or inns,” says David. “And there’s often top class live music to enjoy.”

Leroy Philbrook has not followed a traditional route to become Chief Executive of Colne Town Council. Born and raised in the USA, he was attracted to the bright lights of the London theatres in his twenties.

Managing theatres and productions and working as CEO at Burnley Youth Theatre has given him an appreciation of what he calls, “running a tight ship”.

“I’m really excited to be playing a key role to help Colne develop even more,” he enthuses.

“I’ve lived here for over 15 years and I’m still blown away by the pride that Colners have in their town and how welcoming and friendly they are,” he says.

“Colne has three theatres, so there’s always something going on, from serious drama and music to family entertainment.

“And the live music gig scene in Colne is buzzing in our many bars and at The Muni Theatre,” he says. Dubbed Cool Colne, the town is thriving with stylish independent businesses, a great restaurant quarter, micropubs, bars and distinctive shops.

“A big part of why Colne is a happening place is the entertainment. A big part of why Colne is a happening place is the entertainment.

“And the Colne Heritage Trail features many of the town’s favourite sons, including Wallace Hartley, the heroic bandmaster on the ill-fated Titanic. The Trail helps you appreciate the history of landmarks such as Shackleton Hall with its stunning Victorian arcade and the old market cross, as Colne has been a market town since medieval times.

“Colne is one of just five hill towns in the UK and is a town in the country with many great walks to enjoy. These include the new East Colne Way and there’s a family-friendly set of Canal Walks, which take in Colne’s lovely Alkincoats Park.

“Colne hosts regular markets, a spooky Hallowe’en event, and a magical Christmas celebration. But two major events stand out – The Great British Rhythm & Blues Festival and the Colne Grand Prix, both run by Colne Town Council.

The Colne Grand Prix is one of the biggest cycling events in the North West with famous competitors including Ed Clancy OBE and Colne’s own double Olympic gold medallist, Steven Burke MBE.

And the multi-award winning Blues Festival - one of the biggest in Europe - will be celebrating its 30th anniversary in 2019.

Leroy says “When the Blues Festival is on there are 20,000 people in town taking in more than 150 gigs during the August Bank Holiday weekend.” But it’s not all about music, dance and drama.

“The town is also surrounded by some great countryside and has a fascinating past,” adds Leroy. “The town is also surrounded by some great countryside and has a fascinating past.”

No barriers to romance

There's a beautiful little village in Pendle called Fence. Its unusual name dates back to the medieval age when it was part of the ancient Forest of Pendle.

The future’s bright at Northlight!

A £32 million transformation of an iconic Lancashire cotton mill into a major destination for the North West called Northlight is steaming ahead.

Our huge Grade II listed landmark has a commanding position overlooking the Leeds and Liverpool Canal with stunning views out to Pendle Hill.

This year sees a vibrant new chapter as the mill complex which had lain empty for several years.

The soaring backdrop of Victorian architecture and cotton weaving sheds have added a sense of drama to a range of events.

In-Situ will be bringing the Liverpool Biennial touring programme of contemporary art back to Northlight from 8 - 29 June 2019. We're showing work from artist Madina Aujla from Karachi, including photography, film and fiction,” says Paul.

October 3rd to November 3rd sees a major exhibition of contemporary and historic banners at the mill presented by Super Slow Way and Mid-Pennine Arts as part of the first British Textile Biennial, an exciting exploration of textiles and the textile industry seen through the eyes of artists.

Where better to celebrate this than at one of the first steam powered cotton spinning mills in the area?

Alongside In-Situ’s base, a new state of the art Leisure Box for Burnley FC in the Community has just opened. The mill’s high bay warehouse has been transformed into an indoor 4G pitch for football, a sports hall, cricket lanes, a gym, climbing wall, café and there’ll be an outdoor 3G pitch.

Add to this a dance studio with views from the mill to surrounding countryside and a soft play area for children and there are lots of opportunities to have fun being active at Northlight.

For details about events and opportunities visit www.in-situ.org.uk and www.superslowway.org.uk and for information on the mill’s history and transformation visit www.pearpendle.co.uk/northlight.

He term forest was the name given to the King's hunting grounds which were used by the lords of the manor. The royal deer were enclosed within the fence, which is how the village got its name.

But there were certainly no barriers when a young Belfast boy met a Pendle girl in Fence in the 1980s, as Sam Bell explains. “When my wife and I met in 1983 she was working at the local village pub the Harpers Inn. Sadly, this inn is now closed, but lives on with us as we named our holiday cottage “Harpers Cottage”. At the time I worked for an automotive company which had branches in Belfast and Burnley. I travelled most weeks on business to Burnley and got to know the area very well. In 1983 the Belfast plant closed and I was offered a position in the Burnley plant. I needed a home and to me there was never any doubt it was going to be in the village of Fence! My wife Anne and I moved into a lovely terraced mill cottage and spent a couple of very happy years here.”

Sam and Anne were enchanted by a village which has hundreds of years of fascinating history. The linear village which merges with its neighbour Wheatley Lane, has the only remaining Inghamite chapel in the country. It was the first chapel established by the non-conformist Benjamin Ingham in 1750.

It is also a place which has connections with an outbreak of witchcraft in Pendle. False allegations were made by 10 year old Edmund Robinson and you can find out more on our Scenic Road Trail 2, on www.visitpendle.com The village also has a local art gallery set up by painter Keith Mellings.

As Sam points out: “We love it here as there's so much to do and see. The Forest of Bowland, an Area of Outstanding Beauty, is on our doorstep, and anyone staying at Harpers Cottage for a short break will just love the mix of the tranquility and hospitality of the village. We're blessed with three lovely pubs with one of them, The White Swan, becoming Pendle's first Michelin starred gastro pub.”

Unfortunately, the couple had to move from their home in the village back to Northern Ireland, but the place remained in their hearts, “It was always our dream to return to the village,” says Sam. So in 2007 when we were visiting family and enjoying a stroll through the village we spotted a mill cottage for sale. We decided to buy it for our retirement and we renovated it with a view to using it as a holiday cottage for part of the time. This meant that visitors could explore Pendle and at the same time we could enjoy quality time here,” he explained.

“When we stay at the cottage we love the view of open countryside from our kitchen window and enjoy watching the sun go down. This tranquil location inspires me to improve my guitar skills, whilst enjoying the view over a glass (or two) of wine!” Says Sam.
A walk through time
Explore centuries of history on a gentle stroll along Pendle Water

Pendle Heritage Centre at Park Hill in Barrowford, once a 15th century working farm, is an atmospheric house which holds the key to unlocking Pendle’s history.

It’s a good place to find out more about the true stories of the Pendle Witches of 1612 and of George Fox, who founded the Quaker movement in 1652.

Outside, you can visit the 15th century cruck barn and 18th century walled garden. And there’s a popular tea room for home-made lunches, cakes and refreshments, which looks out onto the garden.

Across the road from the Heritage Centre, at the far end of the car park, is the start of the Pendle Way, where you can continue your journey through time.

Follow the leafy riverside path upstream to Higherford Mill. Built in 1824 in the reign of George IV, this handsome water-powered spinning mill is enjoying a new lease of life as a vibrant studio collective of artists with open studio events and workshops.

Walking along Foreside, in front of the mill, you’ll see a 16th century packhorse bridge spanning the river.

John Wesley, founder of Methodism, preached a sermon from this bridge and took refuge in the White Bear pub, pursued by an angry mob.

This is a lovely backwater of historic cottages and farms and the way leads on to Barferydale Road and continues alongside Pendle Water. Over the wooden bridge and into the meadows, the Pendle Way leads to the beauty spot of Watermeetings. If you have a dog with you, please keep it on a lead and under control as there are usually sheep in these fields.

It’s here, at Watermeetings, that Pendle Water, flowing from the streams off Pendle Hill, meets Blacko Water. It’s a peaceful spot for a paddle and to sit on the rocks to watch the two rivers meet.

Head back to Pendle Heritage Centre and Barrowford which is worth exploring with its riverside park and many independent cafes, pubs and shops. There’s also a Barrowford Town Trail available to download from our website www.visitpendle.com

But if you want to stretch your legs further, along the Pendle Way, the path rises up to the site of an Iron Age settlement which has recently been surveyed by the Pendle Hill Landscape Partnership.

The Way continues along the quiet Adsomrig valley and climbs steadily to the stunning viewpoint of Wors. Here you can see Pendle Hill to the west and the distant Yorkshire peaks of Ingleborough and Pen-y-ghent to the north east before descending to the historic town of Barnoldswick.

To download routes for the 45 mile Pendle Way, including this first easy section to Watermeetings, go to our tourism website www.visitpendle.com and look under Long Walks.
The Colne Grand Prix is one of the biggest cycling events in the UK. But two major events stand out – The Great British Cycling Festival and the Colne Grand Prix, both of which attract 20,000 people in town taking in more than 150 gigs during the August Bank Holiday weekend. But it’s not just about music, dance and drama. The multi-award winning Blues Festival – one of the biggest in Europe – will be celebrating its 30th anniversary. And the live music gig scene in Colne is buzzing in more than 150 venues in the town. The town is also surrounded by some great countryside, such as Shackleton Hall with its stunning Victorian arcade. The Trail helps you appreciate the history of landmarks and surroundings, lovely walks, in an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty.
